NORWICH UNIVERSITY
SHOULDER • to • SHOULDER
INTO OUR THIRD CENTURY

Three years ago, none of us likely anticipated living through a pandemic, much less one lasting this long. And yet, here we are, still navigating its challenges while carrying on with daily life. Thanks to dedicated and generous friends like you, Norwich University has not only survived this turbulent period but also thrived. I am proud to report that, with your partnership, we surpassed our annual fundraising goal of $9 million for fiscal year 2022, having raised $11,488,733. Your inspiring support serves as the bedrock of our mission, further enabling the caliber of academic and leadership opportunities for which Norwich has long been known.

For fiscal year 2023, we remain focused on a strong close to the Shoulder-to-Shoulder fundraising initiative. With less than $4 million left to reach our goal of $28 million by May 31, 2023, we are further concentrating on the Norwich Fund. This flexible source of funding gives Norwich the agility to address top priorities and emerging needs as they arise. There is no better example of this than the COVID-19 pandemic, which compelled Norwich to approach teaching, learning, and operating in an entirely new way. Empowered by the Norwich Fund, we continue to meet challenges head on, keeping the campus safe while also upholding our tradition of discipline, service, and distinction.

Throughout this report, you will find stories of some of Norwich's most passionate supporters. We are moved by these individuals and their commitment to shaping the next generation of leaders. Whether supporting the Norwich Fund, scholarships, or academic enrichment opportunities, they have truly answered the call to keep Norwich at the cusp of innovation and excellence.

On behalf of everyone at Norwich, I thank you again for your investment in the university and its future.

Norwich Forever!

“In its 28th year, the symposium continues to engage students with world-class thinkers on some of the most pressing global concerns of our time.”

—LINDSAY BUDNIK, NU ASSISTANT VICE PRESIDENT OF DEVELOPMENT

Robots Rising: Arming Artificial Intelligence

The 2022 Norwich University Military Writers’ Symposium will explore cutting-edge topics on the impact of AI and robotics on warfare and ethics, while looking to grow its endowment for the long haul Norwich has been a leader in producing cyber talent for over two decades. Recently announced plans to create a new campus center on artificial intelligence, machine learning, and quantum computing will help the university extend its leadership role to these evolving fields. Which is why, when it came time to choose the theme for October’s upcoming 28th annual Norwich University Military Writers’ Symposium (Robots Rising: Arming Artificial Intelligence), it was a natural fit to tie the two initiatives.

“We have such a reputation in the cyber world, because we were ahead of everyone else,” says symposium executive director Prof. Travis Morris, PhD, who also directs the John and Mary Francis Patton Peace and War Center at NU. “We want to continue to do that, and AI is the next realm. ... What the symposium does is leverage that conversation across the entire campus.”

The Norwich University Military Writers’ Symposium brings authors and experts in military history, intelligence, and current affairs to campus to offer perspectives on pressing global concerns. The two-day symposium Oct. 12–13 will examine the rise of robotics and artificial intelligence and their impact on a range of issues, from warfare to ethics.

Guest authors will include August Cole, a non-resident senior fellow at the Brute Krulak Center for Innovation and Creativity at Marine Corps University. He is the co-author, with futurist Peter W. Singer, of Burn In: A Novel of the Real Robotic Revolution and Ghost Fleet: A Novel of the Next World War. “You know you’ve arrived when your book has a movie trailer,” Morris says of Burn In. “He brings a really unique and diverse perspective on AI.”

Sci-fi and fantasy author Martha Wells of the critically acclaimed Murder-

bot Diaries series will also speak. Morris says the symposium wanted to invite a sci-fi writer because “they aren’t beholden to current limitations. ... Sometimes what’s been [imagined] in sci-fi gets translated into reality, and [Wells has] been writing about this for many years.”

Additional speakers include Sharon Weinberger, executive editor for news for Foreign Policy, who brings journalistic insight from having covered defense and intelligence topics as national security editor at The Intercept. Her most recent book is The Imagineers of War: The Untold Story of DARPA, the Pentagon Agency That Changed the World. Robotics expert Liran Antebi, a research fellow at Israel’s Institute for National Security Studies, will lend international perspective.

During the symposium, author Wesley Morgan will receive the 2022 Colby Award, given annually to the author of a first solo work of fiction or nonfiction that has made a major contribution to the understanding of military history, intelligence operations, or international affairs. Morgan is a military affairs reporter who embedded with U.S. troops in Afghanistan as a 19-year-old college student and later covered the Pentagon for Politico. His prize-winning book, The Hardest Place, details the U.S. military’s difficulties in Afghanistan’s Pech Valley.

The 2022 symposium will feature a keynote address by John Abele, the founding chairman of Boston Scientific Corporation and a pioneer in the application of AI and robotics in the medical industry. “He’s a superstar, and we’re fortunate to have him attend,” Morris says.

As in past years, Norwich students will have the opportunity to present original research during the event and engage with guest authors and experts. “For those who are interested in or are fluent [to] some degree in the topic, it enables them to mingle with people who are leading the charge in these areas,” Morris says. “I have seen students and faculty make connections with authors, and it leads to internships and collaboration projects. In some cases, it has even altered students’ career paths.”

The Norwich University Military Writers’ Symposium is the only program of its kind at an American university. It has been made possible through longtime philanthropic partner Col. (IL) Jennifer Pritzker, IL ARNG (Ret.) of the Pritzker Military Foundation (PMF). Last year, the foundation posed an ambitious matching gift challenge to grow the symposium’s endowment, which was renamed the Carlo D’Este ’58 Military Writers’ Endowment in memory of the distinguished Norwich alumnus, author, and symposium co-founder.

The endowment supports the symposium’s operating costs as well as year-round student enrichment opportunities on military history and current affairs. Through 2025, Norwich aims to raise $500,000 for the endowment; the PMF will match the university’s fundraising progress, empowering the endowment to generate enough income annually to make the symposium a self-sustaining event in perpetuity.

“The Pritzker Military Foundation’s incredible support further enables Norwich to bring world-class scholars, authors, and innovators to campus through the symposium,” says Assistant Vice President of Development Lindsay Budnik. “To be able to offer such dynamic and relevant programming to young people is so powerful. Students have a truly unique opportunity to engage with some of the world’s most pioneering minds in military affairs in and out of the classroom. The symposium encourages them to think critically, shaping their perspectives and, possibly, the trajectory of their future goals.”

“None of this would be happening without the Pritzker Military Foundation,” Morris says. “They are the gas that makes the engine run every single year. Our partnership with them is what enables this event to go on, and when the endowment for it is complete, that will mean this event is protected moving ahead. That’s a good thing for Norwich and a good thing for the symposium.”

For more information or to make a gift to support the Norwich University Military Writers’ Symposium, contact Lindsay Budnik, assistant vice president of development at Norwich, at (802) 485-2824 or lbudnik@norwich.edu.

“Norwich is a small, large community. It’s small in numbers, but large in reach.”

—KEVIN HOSIE, CLASS OF 2017 CLASS AGENT

Generations of Giving

The Classes of 1967 and 2017 have strengthened a connection around fundraising

As seniors, the Class of 2017 stood out for their fundraising efforts. “The class ... is a model for a graduating class in rallying the class around its senior class gift,” says Assistant Vice President of Development Reed Curry. “It had a group of students, who are now alumni, who care very deeply about the school, and from the start they wanted to make an impact with their gifts.”

As they prepared for their 50th Reunion, members of the Class of 1967 noted dedication of their younger counterparts “and they wanted to support that effort,” Curry says. The ‘67 grads wound up making a matching gift of $5,000. In turn, the Class of 2017 repaid that kindness by presenting the Old Guard their medallions at 2017’s Homecoming.

Now the two groups of alumni are building on their Guardian Class relationship five years later, as the Class of 2017 prepares to celebrate its 5th Reunion and the Class of 1967 marks 55 years. The latter have again made a $5,000 contribution to the 2017 class gift, and both classes aspire to connect at Homecoming 2022.

“It’s good to be in touch with the younger generation,” says Bill “Buz” Thomas ’67, chair of the gift committee for the Class of 1967’s 55th reunion. “If we can help them get off to a good start in terms of their continuing relationship with the university, then it helps us all.”

Thomas knows that it can be hard for younger alumni to stay close to Norwich as they’re busy with new careers, military service, and starting families. He observes that it’s also harder to reconnect with the university once that closeness is lost. “If we can bring that bond up to a greater level through connecting and staying in touch with [the Class of 2017] and sharing some of the fundraising, it can only be a good thing,” he says.

The Class of 2017 reunion committee has a 100 percent participation goal and an $85,000 fundraising goal for its 5th Reunion, and it’s almost 90 percent of the way there.

“Norwich really molded us and transformed us into the people we are today,” says Kevin Hosie ’17, class agent for the Class of 2017. “We all understood early things like ‘service before self’ and all those core values in our mission statement. I think a lot of that got ingrained in us very early on at Norwich.”

Hosie believes that ethos has been a major contributor to the fundraising success of his class, adding that modest support can make a big difference. “Even if it’s a small donation, it can create a huge impact,” he says. “Small things add up to big things very quickly.”

That the Class of 1967 is again offering a matching gift to the Class of 2017 on the occasion of its 5th Reunion speaks to the character of the Norwich community and the importance it places on tradition, values, and taking care of one another, Curry says. “This happens because volunteers like Kevin and Buz get involved and are willing to reach out to their classmates. Alumni giving is a critical part of what keeps Norwich not only strong but, frankly, around as an institution for over 200 years now.”

Forging Connections

Doing good while bonding in the great outdoors, Fins & Feathers events bring together alumni with a shared passion for fishing, hunting, and Norwich

After graduation, the founders of the Fins & Feathers alumni group kept close connections, like many Hill classmates, meeting up regularly to fish, hunt, and do other outdoorsy things. As a number of them began serving on the Board of Fellows and other Norwich committees, they saw the potential to use their outdoor get-togethers to do more for the school.

“It was really just a group of us hanging out and enjoying stuff we like to do,” says Vin McDermott ’90. “As Norwich was sort of evolving and changing, particularly with its new leadership, we were evolving also. And we thought, what can we do to help the school?”

Several years ago, the group of friends held its first Fins & Feathers fishing tournament, aided by NU Vice President of Development and Alumni Relations Liz Kennedy ’01 and colleagues. “Liz and her team have really supported us well and have done a terrific job,” says Hugh McLaughlin ’87.

That event has grown from a handful of anglers to the roughly 150 participants who gathered in June for the 4th Annual Offshore Fishing Battle in Provincetown, Mass. The group also hosts an annual pheasant hunt and skeet shooting event. Moreover, new Fins & Feathers chapters have launched in New Jersey and California. As more alumni get involved with the outdoor affinity group, they are adding additional events to the mix.

“We would love to grow this thing across the country,” McLaughlin says. “And it can be whatever you want it to be: You can take four guys and go bird hunting, and to me that’s a Fins & Feathers event. As long as you’re bringing Norwich alumni together, it’s good for the alumni, and it’s good for the school.”

To date, Fins & Feathers has raised more than $300,000 for Norwich through its events. Some of those dollars have gone into the President’s Fund, while others have been used to support various scholarships. The group has also donated to university projects with special meaning for Fins &

Feathers members, such as the campaign for a new weight room for the men’s and women’s hockey programs. (Many group members either played hockey at Norwich or were fans of the team.) The alumni group’s latest endeavor is endowing a scholarship in honor of Debra Evans ’87, the late wife of Fins & Feathers committee member Dan Evans ’87.

“What I’ve learned through charity and fundraising is that there is no one charity that outweighs another,” says Donald F. O’Neill ’87, who ran a Nantucket fishing tournament for 18 years that’s raised more than $1 million for various causes. “It’s more about just getting involved and getting other people involved and helping out where needed.”

“The school benefits from our fundraising, and we benefit as individuals from the social aspect of gathering and planning the events,” McDermott says. “That helps us keep our connections strong, and it feels like a team environment. It’s a forum for us to do good, and we feel good about that.”

Fins & Feathers actively seeks to involve current students and younger alumni, asking them to help with social media and other tasks and encouraging them to invite their friends to attend events. Those efforts have led to networking opportunities for everyone involved in Fins & Feathers. Sometimes it leads to jobs or mentorship connections for young alums.

“We can connect the more senior alums to some of the junior alums,” McLaughlin says. “That part’s been very exciting.”

“These guys are making networks across 20 or 30 years of different classes,” says NU Maroon & Gold Athletic Association Associate Director Paul Morgan, who helps support the group. “It really is indicative of the bond that Norwich alums have with each other and are willing to make from any generation.”

For more information about Fins & Feathers, visit alumni.norwich.edu/finsandfeathers.

“Many of [the participating business owners] have been hiring up Norwich grads and saying, ‘These are some of the best hires that I have.’”
